

LESBIAN

Chronic Fatigue Syndrome

Queer Spawn

To Disclose or Not?

- How are you?
- Do you have a boyfriend/partner?
- Where do you work?
- What do your parents do?
- Do you still live at home?
- Busy week?
- What are you up to on the weekend?

Doc Troubles Or Troubled Doc?

invisible presents

All I got's keeping you from being healthy is a positive attitude!	My ex/then/ co-worker just took out his/her wig just a hypocrite/strut!	Maybe if you lost weight/ found a man/ read the paper/ your problems would be solved!	Why can't you just take a nap, get out of bed and find a job like the rest of us?
Lucky! You get to stay in bed all day.	free space with a wheelchair	You don't look sick? You're just complaining too much.
Obviously, you get something out of being sick. Otherwise, you'd get better!	If I haven't heard of it, then it doesn't exist!	But I went through real hard times too, and I got through it just fine, let's talk about what a great person you are.	You know it to much better than some people! Think of the starving children in Africa.
Get up and let God / Power of Prayer / God's punishment hit you!	You just want an excuse to get help from some people pity you.	Why haven't you tried ayurveda/herbals/other "NATURAL" "THERAPIES" (REALITY CHECK)?!	Smoking pot/herbals/ illegal drugs, if we really take care of your pain, man!

invisible illness bingo 1.0
made with draghties bingo!

What's in YOUR invisible knapsack?

McIntosh, P. (1998). White Privilege: Unpacking the Invisible Knapsack. Peace and Freedom (July/August), pp. 10-12.

- Race
- Ethnicity
- Gender
- Age
- Physical Abilities
- Socioeconomic status
- Religion
- Sexual orientation
- Language
- Learning Abilities/Styles
- Other?

